

GAM

he runs at full speed; in which, making a kind of a leap forwards, he lifts both his forelegs very near at the same time; and while these are in the air, and just upon the point of touching the ground, he lifts both his hindlegs almost at once. Farrier's Dict.

GALLOPER. n. f. [from gallop.]

1. A horse that gallops.
2. Mules bred in cold countries are much better to ride than horses for their walk and trot; but they are commonly rough gallopers, though some of them are very fleet. Martin's Husb.

GALLOWAY. n. f. A horse not more than fourteen hands high, much used in the North; probably as coming originally from Galloway; a shire in Scotland.

TO GALLOW. v. a. [azelpen, to fright, Saxon.] To terrify; to fright.

The wrathful skies
Gallow the very wand'ers of the dark,
And make them keep their caves. Shakespeare's King Lear.

GALLOWGLASSES. n. f.

1. It is worth then likewise of footmen under their shirts of mail, the which footmen call gallowglasses: the which name doth discover them also to be ancient English; for gallogla signifies an English servitor or yeoman. And he being so armed in a long shirt of mail, down to the calf of his leg, with a long broad ax in his hand, was then pedes gravis armaturæ; and was instead of the footman that now weareth a corset, before the corset was used, or almost invented. Spenser on Ireland.
2. [Hammer, otherwise than Spenser.] Soldiers among the wild Irish, who serve on horseback.

A puissant and mighty pow'r
Of gallowglasse and stout kernes,
Is marching hitherward in proud array. Shakespeare's Henry VI.

GALLOW. n. f. [It is used by some in the singular; but by Gallows.] more only in the plural, or sometimes has another plural gallowes. Galla, Gothick; zealga, Saxon; galles, Dutch; which some derive from gabalus, furca, Latin; others from gall, high; others from gallus, Welsh, power: but it is probably derived like gallow, to fright, from azelpen, the gallowes being the great object of legal terror.]

1. A beam laid over two posts, on which malefactors are hanged.
2. This monster sat like a hangman upon a pair of gallows: in his right hand he was painted holding a crown of laurel, in his left hand a purse of money. Sidney, b. ii.

I would we were all of one mind, and one mind good; O, there were desolation of gaolers and gallowes. Shakespeare's Cymbel.

I prophesied, if a gallow were on land,
This fellow could not drown. Shakespeare's Tempest.

A little before dinner he took the major aside, and whispered him in the ear, that execution must that day be done in the town, and therefore required him that a pair of gallows should be erected. Hayward.

A production that naturally groweth under gallowes, and places of execution. Brown's Vulgar Errors, b. ii.

A poor fellow, going to the gallows, may be allowed to feel the smart of waips while he is upon Tyburn road. Swift.

2. A wretch that deserves the gallows.

Cupid hath been five thousand years a boy.
—Ay, and a shrewd unhappy gallow too. Shakespeare.

GALLOWFREE. adj. [gallow and free.] Exempt by destiny from being hanged.

Let him be gallowfree by my consent,
And nothing suffer, since he nothing meant. Dryden.

GALLOWTREE. n. f. [gallow and tree.] The tree of terror; the tree of execution.

He hung their conquer'd arms, for more defame,
On gallowtrees, in honour of his dearest dame. Fai. Queen.

A Scot, when from the gallowtree got loose,
Drops into Styx, and turns a foland goose. Cleaveland.

GAMBADE. n. f. [gamba, Italian, a leg.] Spatterdash; GAMBA DO. boots worn upon the legs above the shoe.

The pettifogger ambles to her in his gambades once a week. Dennis's Letters.

GAMBLER. n. f. [A cant word, I suppose, for game or gamester.] A knave whose practice it is to invite the unwary to game and cheat them.

GAMBOGE. n. f.

Gamboge is a concreted vegetable juice, partly of a gummy, partly of a resinous nature. It is heavy, of a bright yellow colour, and scarce any smell. It is brought from America, and from many parts of the East Indies, particularly from Cambaja, or Cambogia, whence it has its name. Gamboge was not known in Europe till 1603, and soon after got into use as a purgative medicine; but the roughness of its operation rendering it less esteemed as such, it got into use in painting, where it yet retains its credit. Hill.

TO GAMBOL. v. n. [gambiller, French.]

1. To dance; to skip; to frolic; to jump for joy; to play merry frolics.

Bears, tigers, ounces, pards,
Gambol'd before them. Milton's Paradise Lost, b. iv.

GAM

The king of elfs, and little fairy queen,
Gambol'd on heaths, and danc'd on ev'ry green. Dryden.

The monsters of the flood
Gambol around him in the wat'ry way,
And heavy whales in awkward measures play. Peje.

2. To leap; to start.

'Tis not madness
That I have utter'd; bring me to the test,
And I the matter will record, which madness
Would gambol from. Shakespeare's Hamlet.

GAMBOT. n. f. [from the verb.]

1. A skip; a hop; a leap for joy.

A gentleman had got a favourite spaniel, that would be still toying and leaping upon him, and playing a thousand pretty gambols. L'Estrange's Fables.

Bacchus through the conquer'd Indies rode,
And beats in gambols frisk'd before their honest god. Dryden.

2. A frolic; a wild prank.

For who did ever play his gambols,
With such insufferable rambles? Hudibras, p. iii. cant. 2.

GAMMREL. n. f. [from gamba, gambarella, Italian.] The leg of a horse.

What can be more admirable than for the principles of the fibres of a tendon to be so mixed as to make it a soft body, and yet to have the strength of iron? as appears by the weight which the tendon, lying on a horse's gammrel, doth then command, when he rears up with a man upon his back. Greus.

GAME. n. f. [gama, a jest, Islandick.]

1. Sport of any kind.

We have had pastimes here, and pleasing game. Shakespeare.

2. Jest, opposed to earnest or seriousness.

Then on her head they set a garland green,
And crowned her 'twixt earnest and 'twixt game. Fai. Qu.

3. Insolent merriment; sportive insult.

Do they not seek occasion of new quarrels,
On my refusal, to distress me more;
Or make a game of my calamities. Milton's Agonist.

4. A single match at play.
5. Advantage at play.

Mutual vouchers for our fame we stand,
And play the game into each other's hand. Dryden.

6. Scheme pursued; measures planned.

This seems to be the present game of that crown, and that they will begin no other 'till they see an end of this. Temple.

7. Field sports: as, the chase, falconry.

If about this hour he make his way,
Under the colour of his usual game,
He shall here find his friends with horse and men,
To set him free from his captivity. Shakespeare's Henry VI.

What arms to use, or nets to frame,
Wild beasts to combat, or to tame,
With all the myst'ries of that game. Waller.

Some sportsmen, that were abroad upon game, spied a company of bustards and cranes.

8. Animals pursued in the field; animals appropriated to legal sportsmen.

Hunting, and men, not beasts, shall be his game,
With war, and hostile snare, such as refuse
Subjection to his empire tyrannous. Milton's Parad. Lost.

There is such a variety of game springing up before me, that I am distracted in my choice, and know not which to follow. Dryden's Fables, Preface.

A bloodhound will follow the tract of the person he pursues, and all hounds the particular game they have in chase. Arbutnot on Aliments.

Go, with thy Cynthia hurl the pointed spear
At the rough bear, or chase the flying deer;
I and my Chloe take a nobler aim,
At human hearts we fling, nor ever miss the game. Prior.

Proud Nimrod first the bloody chase began,
A mighty hunter, and his prey was man:
Our haughty Norman boasts that barb'rous name,
And makes his trembling slaves the royal game. Peje.

9. Solemn contests exhibited as spectacles to the people.

The games are done, and Cæsar is returning. Shakespeare.

Milo, when entering the Olympick game,
With a huge ox upon his shoulders came. Denham.

TO GAME. v. n. [gaman, Saxon.]

1. To play at any sport.
2. To play wantonly and extravagantly for money.

Gaming leaves no satisfaction behind it: it no way profits either body or mind. Locke.

GAMMECOCK. n. f. [game and cock.] Cocks bred to fight.

They managed the dispute as fiercely as two gamecocks in the pit. Locke.

GAME-EGG. n. f. [game and egg.] Eggs from which fighting cocks are bred.

Thus boys hatch game-eggs under birds of prey,
To make the fowl more furious for the fray. Garth.

GAMMEKEEPER. n. f. [game and keep.] A person who looks after game, and sees it is not destroyed. GAMESOME.

GAN

GAMESOME. adj. [from game.] Frolicsome; gay; sportive; playful; sportful.

Geron, though old, yet gamesome, kept one end with Colina. Sidney.

I am not gamesome; I do lack some part
Of that quick spirit that is in Antony. Shakespeare's Julius Cæsar.

The gamesome wind among her tresses plays,
And curleth up those growing riches short. Fairfax, b. iv.

Belial, in like gamesome mood. Milton's Paradise Lost.

This gamesome humour of children should rather be encouraged, to keep up their spirits and improve their strength and health, than curbed or restrained. Locke.

GAMESOMENESS. n. f. [from gamesome.] Sportiveness; merriment.

GAMESOMELY. adv. [from gamesome.] Merrily.

GAMMASTER. n. f. [from game.]

1. One who is vitiously addicted to play.

Keep a gamester from the dice, and a good student from his book, and it is wonderful. Shakespeare's Merry Wives of Windsor.

A gamester, the greater master he is in his art, the worse man he is. Bacon.

Gamesters for whole patrimonies play;
The steward brings the deeds, which must convey
The whole estate. Dryden's Juvenal, Sat. 1.

Could we look into the mind of a common gamester, we should see it full of nothing but trumps and matadores: her slumbers are haunted with kings, queens and knaves. Addison.

All the superstitious whims relate,
That fill a female gamester's pate;
What agony of soul she feels
To see a knave's inverted heels. Swift.

2. One who is engaged at play.

When lenity and cruelty play for kingdoms,
The gentler gamester is the soonest winner. Shakespeare's Henry V.

A man may think, if he will, that two eyes see no more than one; or that a gamester sees always more than a looker-on; but, when all is done, the help of good counsel is that which fetters business straight. Bacon, Essay 28.

3. A merry frolicsome person.

You're a merry gamester,
My lord Sands. Shakespeare's Henry VIII.

4. A prostitute.

She's impudent, my lord,
And was a common gamester to the camp. Shakespeare.

GAMMER. n. f. [Of uncertain etymology; perhaps from grand mere, and therefore used commonly to old women.] The compellation of a woman corresponding to gaffer.

GAMMON. n. f. [gambone, Italian.]

1. The buttock of an hog salted and dried; the lower end of the fitch.

Ask for what price thy venal tongue was sold:
A rusty gammone of some seven years old. Dryden's Jun. Sat.

Gammone, that give a relish to the taste,
And potted fowl, and fish, come in so fast,
That ere the first is out, the second stinks. Dryden's Pers.

2. A kind of play with dice.

The quick dice,
In thunder leaping from the box, awake
The founding gammone. Thomson's Autumn.

GAMMUT. n. f. [gama, Italian.] The scale of musical notes.

Madam, before you touch the instrument,
To learn the order of my fingering,
I must begin with rudiments of art,
To teach you gammut in a briefer sort. Shakespeare.

When by the gammut some musicians make
A perfect song, others will undertake,
By the same gammut chang'd, to equal it:
Things simply good can never be unfit.
Long has a race of heroes fill'd the stage,
That rant by note, and through the gammut rage;
In fongs and airs express their martial fire,
Combat in trills, and in a feuge expire. Addison.

GAN, for began, from gin for begin.

The noble knight gan feel
His vital force to faint. Spenser.

TO GANCH. v. a. [ganciare, from gancio, a hook, Italian; ganche, French.] To drop from a high place upon hooks by way of punishment: a practice in Turkey, to which Smith alludes in his Poecocius.

Cohors catenis qua pia stridulis
Gemit onulis, vel fude trans sinum
Luctantur acia, pendulive
Sanguineis luctantur unguis. Muse Angl.

GANDER. n. f. [gansa, Saxon.] The male of the goose.

As deep drinketh the goose as the gander. C Camden's Rem.

One gander will serve five geese. Mortimer's Husbandry.

TO GANG. v. n. [gangan, Dutch; gangan, Saxon; gang, Scottish.] To go; to walk: an old word not now used, except ludicrously.

But let them gang alone,
As they have brewed, to let them bear blame. Spenser.

GAO

Your flaunting beaus gang with their breasts open. Arbutnot.

GANG. n. f. [from the verb.] A number herding together; a troop; a company; a tribe; a herd. It is seldom used but in contempt or abhorrence.

Oh, you panderly rascals! there's a knot, a gang, a pack, a conspiracy against me. Shakespeare's Merry Wives of Windsor.

As a gang of thieves were robbing a house, a mastiff fell a barking. L'Estrange, Fable 21.

Admitted in among the gang,
He acts and talks as they befriend him. Prior.

GANGHON. [French.] A kind of flower. Ainsworth.

GANGLION. n. f. [galyphion.] A tumour in the tendinous and nervous parts, proceeding from a fall or stroke. It relists, if stirred; if pressed upon the side, is not diverted, nor can be turned round. Harris.

Bonefitters usually represent every bone dislocated, though possibly it be but a ganglion, or other crude tumour or preternatural protuberance of some part of a joint. Wise.

GANGRENE. n. f. [gangrene, Fr. gangrena, Lat.] A mortification; a stoppage of circulation followed by putrefaction. This experiment may be transferred unto the cure of gangrenes, either coming of themselves, or induced by too much applying of opiates. Bacon's Natural History.

She saves the lover, as we gangrenes stay,
By cutting hope, like a lopt limb, away. Waller.

A discolouring in the part was supposed an approach of a gangrene. Wise's Surgery.

If the substance of the soul is fettered with these passions, the gangrene is gone too far to be ever cured: the inflammation will rage to all eternity. Addison's Spectator.

TO G'ANGRENE. v. a. [gangrene, French, from the noun.] To corrupt to mortification.

In cold countries, when men's noses and ears are mortified, and, as it were, gangrened with cold, if they come to a fire they rot off presently; for that the few spirits, that remain in those parts, are suddenly drawn forth, and so putrefaction is made complete. Bacon's Natural History.

Gangren'd members must be lop'd away,
Before the nobler parts are tainted to decay. Dryden.

TO G'ANGRENE. v. n. To become mortified.

My griefs not only pain me
As a lingering disease;
But finding no redress, ferment and rage,
Nor less than wounds immedicable
Ramble and fester, and gangrene
To black mortification. Milton's Agonist.

As phlegmons are subject to mortification, so also in fat bodies they are apt to gangrene after opening, if that fat be not speedily digested out. Wise's Surgery.

G'ANGRENOUS. adj. [from gangrene.] Mortified; producing or betokening mortification.

The blood, turning acrimonious, corrodes the vessels, producing hemorrhages, pustules red, lead-coloured, black and gangrenous. Arbutnot on Aliments.

G'ANTELOPE. n. f. [gantlet is only corrupted from gantelope, GANTLET.] gant, all, and loopen, to run, Dutch.] A military punishment, in which the criminal running between the ranks receives a lash from each man.

But would'st thou, friend, who hast two legs alone,
Would'st thou to run the gantlet these expose,
To a whole company of hob-nail'd shoes? Dryden's Jew.

Young gentlemen are driven with a whip, to run the gantlet through the several classes. Locke.

G'ANZA. n. f. [gansa, Spanish, a goose.] A kind of wild goose, by a flock of which a virtuoso was fabled to be carried to the lunar world.

They are but idle dreams and fancies,
And favour strongly of the ganza's. Hudibras, p. ii.

GAOL. n. f. [gaol, Welsh; geol, French.] A prison; a place of confinement. It is always pronounced and too often written jail, and sometimes goal.

Then am I the prisoner, and his bed my goal. Sh. K. Lear.

Have I been ever free, and must my house
Be my retentive enemy, my goal? Shakespeare's Timon.

If we mean to thrive and do good, break open the gaols, and let out the prisoners. Shakespeare's Henry VI. p. ii.

G'ALDELIVERY. n. f. [gaol and deliver.] The judicial process, which by condemnation or acquittal of persons confined evacuates the prison.

Then doth th' aspiring soul the body leave,
Which we call death; but were it known to all,
What life our souls do by this death receive,
Men would it birth or galdelivery call. Davies.

These make a general galdelivery of souls, not for punishment.

G'ALDER. n. f. [from gaol.] Keeper of a prison; he to whose care the prisoners are committed. South.

This
